Prologue

Being a Christian in the 21st century is not business as usual.

Thankfully some influential pastors (meaning they have a large reach, either through social media or through other avenues) have come to understand that we are living at the end of the age detailed by Jesus in Matthew 24.

These pastors, many of whom have traditionally limited their time or interest on the topic of eschatology[1] have created outstanding audio-video playlists of exegetical sermons such as for the books of Daniel and Revelation that contain old and new testament prophetic scripture, respectively. These videos provide incredible detail on what we can expect in this age.

Before I continue, I want to state here that many faithful Christians have concluded that we are living – not at the end of the church age, but also past the Millenial Reign of Christ, and that we are now living within "satan's little season" found in the book of Revelation 20:7-8. Regardless of your stance, the information and conclusions contained in this book are consistent because the focus here, unlike one of the most common eschatologic topics, is not on the rapture of the church, but on one of the main signs that satan currently rules this earth, along with his fallen
